

ALL NATIONS CRITICIZE ITALY'S MURDERS

Terrible Slaughter Under the Guise of War Creates Bitter Feeling.

London, Nov. 4.—Italian cruelties in Tripoli and wholesale massacres of men, women and children by Italian troops in Northern Africa may lead shortly to a concerted demand by the powers that Italy observe the rules of civilized warfare.

Premier Giolitti's denials of Italian atrocities in Tripoli have failed signally to eradicate the impression that no civilized nation has ever waged such a terrible slaughter under the guise of war. English correspondents have been bitter in their condemnation of the brutality of the Italians.

England, in common with Germany and Austria, is preparing to notify Italy that her conduct of the war is intolerable. Austria, Italy's hereditary foe, is said to be on the point of threatening armed intervention if the murders are not stopped. Germany, always friendly to the Turks, is aroused at the reports of brutality.

Italy's policy of "no quarter" is said to be the result of reverses, its troops having suffered in the fighting against the allied Turk and Arab armies in the vicinity of the city of Tripoli. The report is generally confirmed here that the Italians have been forced to retreat within the walls of the city itself.

BABE BURNED TO DEATH IN WEST SIDE FLAT FIRE

Mother Probably Fatally In- jured and Father Severely Burned in Morning Blaze.

A baby was burned to death, its mother was probably fatally injured, and three other people were severely burned in an early morning fire in a three-story flat at 1359 Newberry avenue.

The baby was found dead in bed, its little body burned to a crisp. The mother, who leaped panic stricken from a third story window, received internal injuries. The father groped his way through flames and smoke with another baby in his arms, and both received painful burns.

The dead:

ANNA TUBIN, 11 months old.

The injured:

MRS. FANNIE TUBIN, the mother; internal injuries and burns; county hospital.

ABRAHAM TUBIN, the father; severely burned in rescuing 2-year-old baby, Michael Reese hospital.

CELIA TUBIN, two years old; burned about body; Michael Reese hospital.

MISS SARAH CARMON, 19, who lives on second floor; burned about face and arms and bruised; county hospital.

Another fire was burning at the same time at Jefferson and Maxwell streets, a block away, and there was a delay before firemen arrived to fight the blaze in the flat building.
